Dear Ara,

I write on behalf of Baroness Cox, who sends her greetings to you and the Booloozian family.

We understand that no words can alleviate the immense pain of losing your beloved son, Avetis, who made the ultimate sacrifice in 2020. His bravery to provide medical assistance to his friends, even in the heat of battle, stands as a testament to his extraordinary courage and compassion.

We recently learned of your incredibly generous donation to the Lady Cox Rehabilitation Centre, made in Avetis' cherished memory. Your act of kindness, born from such profound loss, is deeply appreciated. It reflects the very spirit of care and selflessness that Avetis embodied.

With your support, the staff and patients are embarking on a new chapter in Armenia. The Centre will once again be a sanctuary of healing and hope, providing essential therapy to the people of Artsakh living with disabilities and those suffering from chronic pain.

It means restoring dignity, fostering independence, and offering a brighter future to countless lives. Your son's legacy of compassion will continue to transform lives through every rehab session, every moment of progress, and every ray of hope that the Centre provides.

From the bottom of our hearts: thank you! Your decision to channel your grief into such a powerful force for good is truly inspiring.

With heartfelt appreciation,

Sam Mason
